The approaching school year has brought with it new challenges for many families. Whether you are homeschooling, heading back into the classroom or a combination of both, we want to help by providing the additional natural science enrichment and resources parents and teachers have come to depend on from The Wilderness Center. Your Wild Classroom will get your young students outside, studying and learning.

“We are so happy to be able to support our local families and teachers, both those who have been participating in our traditional homeschool programs and those who are looking to get students outside either at home or in the schoolyard,” says Community Engagement Coordinator Carrie Elvey.

Your Wild Classroom will offer nature-based science modules focused on a theme, and each will begin with an introductory presentation which can be joined live via Zoom or viewed on YouTube at your convenience. Modules contain four lessons, including links to short introductory videos, parent/teacher lesson plans, activity descriptions, and worksheets. A live wrap-up and quiz show will review what was covered in each module and reinforce the fun of learning!

Each module coincides with Ohio’s standards for grades K-5. Activities and lessons will be geared for grades 3-5, but are easily adaptable by the teacher or parent for all elementary grades.

“Our own backyards and local green spaces can be such great classrooms. Add that to what we know about how contact with nature is good for our kids’ mental and physical health, and this curriculum is perfect for the current learning environment.” Elvey said.

Traditional classroom or homeschool pod teachers should contact Lynda Price at 330.359.5235 or lynda@wildernesscenter.org for separate pricing and scheduling.

CURRICULUM

- Entomology – August 24
  We’ll learn to identify insect groups, discover their habitat preferences, and go on insect safaris.

- Forestry – September 21
  We’ll learn how to identify trees, all of their important parts, and how they come together and make a forest.

- Soil – October 19
  Soil is a very important part of any ecosystem and we’ll learn what makes it up and how it changes over time.

- Ornithology – November 16
  This module will look at the many adaptations that make birds so amazing.

- Bonus Activity: Landforms and Mapping – December 14
  Available when full semester is purchased.

- Geology – January 11
  After reviewing the basic rock types, we’ll dig deeper into the geologic units of Ohio.

- Mammalogy – February 8
  We’ll take a closer look at skulls, behavior, and the tracks and signs that mammals leave behind.

- Botany – March 8
  Journey along the life of a plant as we learn about survival strategies of plants in a variety of habitats.

- Herpetology – April 5
  We’ll learn about the unique adaptations of reptiles and amphibians, and ways we can help them survive and thrive.

- Bonus Activity: Outdoor Adventure – April 26
  Available when full semester is purchased.

Cost: $25/module for members; $30/module for nonmembers
Director’s Corner

It can be more challenging to see the impact your support of TWC’s mission is achieving now that we have moved the majority of our programs online. It is easy to see what your membership, sponsorship, and contributions support while there are smiling and engaged children on site, or when we offer one of our public programs offsite. This loss of direct, in-person connection may seem an insurmountable challenge. However, like all of you, TWC has found a variety of methods to continue our work and fulfill our mission via adaptation and dedication. Just like the proverbial duck on a calm pond, there is much activity happening below the surface as we propel forward in a methodical, intentional direction. And much like a busy Momma with many ducklings, it may seem like we are drifting apart at times, but at the end of the day we are all working mightily under the surface to once again come together and stay connected.

During these changing times, our conservation efforts have not slowed. In fact they have accelerated. We are currently considering the outright purchase of a few ecologically strategic plots of land. Our efforts to restore and expand functional woodlands, wetlands, and grassland habitats is going strong with some of our previously restored prairie habitat now in full bloom and filled with pollinator activity.

TWC’s Consulting Forestry service has also never been busier and continues to serve as a leader in sustainable forestry. The Working Woods Project, developed in collaboration with Holden Arboretum, was just highlighted in a presentation for the Ohio Society of American Foresters. This program serves as a 67 acre living model of the benefits of strategically managed woodlands as functional wildlife habitat and wetlands filtration, as well as offering ecological field study sites for the next generation of students. TWC’s Consulting Forestry service continues to work with municipalities and individual land owners throughout our region to advocate for and provide the best care for their woodlands through sustainable practices.

TWC’s Education Team has also become a regional leader on how best to keep students of all ages engaged in and learning from nature while schools are closed or connections are limited. Whether it is through our Wilderness Wonderings video series, the lesson plan based Your Wild Classroom series, live Facebook Astronomy programs, or onsite interpretive signage and exploration kits for families, evidence of your support is seen by thousands of people throughout our region.

So whether we see you here on-site for a passive walk through a meadow, attending an education program, or online at our next Night in With Nature, thank you for your continued support. Please know, we will continue paddling every day to honor your trust.

Dark Skies Conservation Virtual Conference Scheduled

Save the date to join us on November 14, 2020, for TWC’s Dark Sky Conservation Virtual Conference. Artificial light at night has revolutionized the way we live and work outdoors, but it has come at a steep price. When used indiscriminately, outdoor lighting can disrupt wildlife, impact human health, waste money and energy, contribute to climate change, and block our view of the universe. The International Dark Sky Association (IDA) is the recognized authority on light pollution and is the leading organization combating light pollution worldwide. Our keynote speaker, Adam Dalton, IDA, International Dark Sky Places Program Manager, will discuss the work of this organization and how individuals can make a difference in reducing light pollution. The IDA Ohio Chapter president will discuss their current projects and initiatives, and we will have a speaker discussing outdoor lighting, we’ll look at lighting that contributes to light pollution, provide dark sky friendly lighting options and learn how to conduct a lighting inventory of your home’s outdoor lighting. And, finally, our very own Carrie Elvey will discuss the affects of light pollution on wildlife. Information will soon be provided on registration for the conference.

Can you tell us a little about your background?
Tim has been married to his wife Rita for 49 years and 10 months! They have two adult sons, three grandchildren and a dog. Tim retired from the Timken Company after 38 years. An outdoor enthusiast, Tim enjoys archery and makes his own bows. He also likes camping, fly fishing, hiking, and dabbles in woodcarving.

What brought you to TWC?
A close friend of Tim and Rita had volunteered with our now-retired Building and Grounds Manager, Ken Schlegel. When that friend passed away, Tim offered to step in and help Ken with snow removal. It kind of snowballed (pun intended!) from there.

What do you do here?
Tim is always happy to help wherever he is needed. In the summer, Tim mows the grass along the trails and weedwhacks around the buildings on our campus. In the winter months, Tim works hard in the early mornings to make sure our parking lots and sidewalks are safe and clear of snow. All year long Tim also works hard to keep our trails clean of litter and debris, for the safety and enjoyment of our visitors and wildlife. If you have enjoyed a beautiful hike along one of our trails, it is in part thanks to his hard work!

Why do you think TWC is worth giving of your time?
Being an outdoorsman, nature is important to Tim. He and Rita also raised their family to have a deep appreciation of the natural world. They both feel that The Wilderness Center is a great place for people, young and old, to walk the trails and just spend some quiet time.

According to Rita, Tim has taken his work with him elsewhere, now cleaning hiking trails of sticks and rocks when they visit other trails, as well! Thanks, Tim, for keeping trails safe wherever you go!

The Wilderness Center Woodcarving Club is sad to announce the cancellation of their September Woodcarving Show. Instead, they hope you will join them for a virtual week-long Woodcarving Celebration later this fall. Watch this newsletter and social media pages for information.

In the last several years you may have noticed wire cages protecting tree saplings from browsing wildlife while hiking on the Wilderness Walk and Sigrist Woods trails and wondered what species of trees were being protected. The answer to that question? American chestnut (Castanea dentata). So what happened to this once dominant tree species of eastern forest ecosystems? The chestnut blight, a fungus that was introduced to North America during the first decade of the 20th century, moved throughout the range of this species in just a few decades and reduced its population to stunted shrubs.

As part of a much larger effort to re-establish this species in eastern forests, TWC has been working in cooperation with Dr. Richard Stoffer, Professor Emeritus of Ashland University and long-time TWC member, Researchers at the Virginia Polytechnic Institute in Blacksburg VA and the American Chestnut Cooperators Foundation (ACCF). This work seeks to develop a blight resistant strain of pure American chestnut through intercrosses among resistant American chestnuts from numerous locations. The parental trees for each seedling planted have been recorded so that researchers can determine which are blight resistant and which are not.

It is our hope here at TWC that future generations will have the opportunity to walk among these magnificent trees.

Adam Beichler of TWC Consulting Forestry has spent the past few years actively working with partners throughout northeast Ohio to change the understanding of forest management. This culminated on August 5, when Adam was invited to be the keynote speaker at the Ohio Society of American Foresters summer meeting.

Adam’s presentation included an overview of the Working Woods Project which he has been consulting on with Holden Forests and Gardens over the past 3 years. The project provides a site for the demonstration of sustainable forest management to private land owners and natural resource professionals. The 67 acre woodland was broken into 2.5 acre sample plots, employing various forest management activities. Cull tree utilization, invasive species control, and single tree selection harvesting are just a few of the management objectives that have been completed. Tree growth, reproduction, and wildlife populations are just a few of the ongoing studies which will be taking place in the Working Woods.

Adam also spoke about TWC Consulting Forestry’s work with local municipalities in Cuyahoga County. Many of the local townships have anti-forest management laws/rules. Adam has been working with local governments to amend those laws/rules to allow timber harvesting when performed under the supervision of a professional forester. This work has culminated in responsible, permitted timber harvests across the county. Working with The Division of Forestry in the community of Gates Mills, which had one of the strictest local ordinances in the state, Adam will soon be handling the first permitted timber harvest in the community in many years.

Save the Date for TWC’s Virtual Fall Auction Benefit
Saturday, November 21, 2020
7:00 – 8:00 PM

As the days grow shorter and temperatures begin to drop, The Wilderness Center will warm the evening with friendship and fun at our Fall Auction Benefit. Although we will miss seeing you in person, we invite you to connect with us via a festive, live streaming Zoom gathering, auction and benefit.

This year more than ever, your support is critically important to The Wilderness Center’s mission of education, conservation and community. Now more than ever, we are relying on you to help us cross the funding gap created by COVID-19. The funds we raise at the Fall Auction Benefit will allow us to continue adapting to our changing environment in order to meet the needs of our community, developing outstanding online programming for people throughout all walks of life, restoring and protecting woodlands, wetlands, grasslands and even our dark skies for all to enjoy and bringing people together through their love of nature.

Although it has been a challenging year, there is still much to celebrate, namely the bounty of nature and support of friends like you. Please check TWC’s webpage, Facebook page and your email for more information about our tempting auction items, stories of how your support is making a positive difference in our community as well as the fun and surprises planned for the evening. We hope to see you there.
